To whom it may concern,

I'm pleased to be writing this letter of recommendation on behalf of Tim Meehan, whose company Northern New England Homes has recently completed the rehabilitation of a luxury home badly damaged by a fire at Stowe Mountain Resort.

Tim was instrumental in assessing the measures to be taken in the gutting and partial restructuring of the building, providing accurate estimates for the work, assembling a team of engineers and subcontractors, and assisting the owners with the substantiation of all these efforts and costs for their insurance company and lending institution. He was able to achieve all this in a timely manner and remained resolute in his convictions about all of the above, sometimes in the face of disagreement from various factions involved in the project.

In a visit with the owners just after their taking occupancy at the beginning of the winter 2008/2009, I was treated to a tour of this freshly renovated residence. The pride and delight expressed by the owners in this final result underscored Tim and his crew's obvious attention to all details.

As a designer of many resort homes I look for facilitators who can carry out the work at a very exacting standard, but also have the imagination and foresight to resolve difficult details. Someone who is not afraid to make the call, when something unforeseen crops up in the building process! Tim embodies these qualities, and I found him to be an excellent communicator and a joy to work with.
